NON-EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR FEES IN THE FTSE 350 AND SMALLCAP

Introduction

This update looks at Non-Executive Director actual fees paid and the disclosed fee policies for FTSE 350 and FTSE SmallCap companies with year ends between 1 March 2020 and 31 January 2021. Fee differences between financial services companies and other sectors are also analysed in this report.

Key points to note

- Median actual fees received by Non-Executive Directors in the SmallCap have decreased due to a high proportion of directors taking voluntary reductions in 2020 (typically for three months). In FTSE 350 companies, median fees received were broadly stable year on year, with the exception of some financial services companies where fees received have increased slightly.
- Median policy fee levels for Non-Executive Directors are mostly unchanged year-on-year, with the majority of FTSE 350 and SmallCap companies freezing fee rates.
- The number of companies paying additional responsibility fees for the main Board committees is increasing. The most significant increase is in the percentage of companies paying additional fees for the Designated NED, for the purpose of the employee voice, as the role and time commitment becomes more defined.

Fee analysis by index – total fees received

Tables 1 to 3 provide quartile analyses of Non-Executive Directors' fee levels in FTSE 100, 250 and SmallCap companies, divided between Non-Executive Board Chairs, Senior Independent Directors (who are not deputy chairs), Audit Committee Chairs, Remuneration Committee Chairs and other Non-Executive Directors who chair no committees. Table 4 shows the median increases in Non-Executive Directors fees increased by index and by sector.

Fees received by NEDs increased most significantly in financial services ("FS") companies, particularly FS companies in the FTSE 100. Median fees received for NEDs in the FTSE 100 as a whole remained broadly flat year on year.

Median total fees received in the FTSE 250 have also remained similar to last year, whereas total fees paid to FTSE SmallCap Non-Executive Directors have seen the largest decreases, mostly as a result of the voluntary fee reduction taken by some companies in 2020 in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. The most significant decrease was seen in fees received by SmallCap Independent Directors which fell by nearly 6%.

Fee analysis by index – additional fees policies

Most companies specify a formal Non-Executive Director fee policy, typically providing details of the 'base fee' plus additional fees for being the Senior Independent Director, chairing and/or being member of each of the main committees or the Designated NED. Tables 5 to 7 provide quartile analyses of the fee policies by index.

Fee analysis by sector – additional fees policies

Tables 9 to 11 analyse Non-Executive Directors' fee policies in FTSE 100, 250 and SmallCap companies, divided between financial services companies and other sectors. These show that NED roles in FS companies generally attract a premium compared to NED roles at other companies, particularly for committee responsibilities.

Shareholding guidelines

It remains relatively uncommon for there to be shareholding guidelines for NEDs. Only around a quarter of FTSE 100 and between 5% and 10% of FTSE 250 and Small Cap companies disclose having formal NED shareholding guidelines. This is broadly similar to previous years.

Conclusion

Overall, companies are showing similar restraint in reviewing NED fees as they have in reviewing executive director remuneration. This is not a great surprise, as increases in NED fees will be harder to justify while many employees have been impacted by the pandemic, whether that is through furlough, pay freezes, reduced variable pay, redundancy or the impact of changes in working practices. Where fees have increased, this has typically been associated with increasing time commitments, (e.g. in relation to committee responsibilities or the new role of Designated NED) or where fee rates are demonstrably at odds with market norms.

As we come out of the pandemic and the economy recovers it is possible that, along with some wage inflation, we may also see some inflationary pressure on NED fees.
